“ I wrote a little diddy that I think fits him to a t.

Those of us that remain are all in such pain, left here with an unfillable hole.

But it's the ones that never met him that have the biggest loss of all...never knowing his incredible soul.

RIP sweet Brandon.

“ Most of my memories of Brandon are of course much older than these I've read. I think he was 2 when I met him. I can tell by what I've read he grew up just the same sweet boy he was at 2. Rambunctious yes, but so sweet. My prayers go up for Gary, Trisha and Blake for the coming days. I pray God guides you through each day and I know He will comfort you if you just look to Him. It's stated clearly in Matthew 5:4 where He says "Blessed are those that grieve; they will be comforted".

“ A child is a gift from God to be loved.

Brandon was such a gift.

Trisha adored her sons as I was given many accounts at her work place the many joys she experienced in raising them both.

I had the benefit to meet Brandon the Sunday before. His quick smile of excitement endeared me to him. I was there mere moments before his willingness to engage a stranger into comfort for being there.

I was able to pick at his attitude towards girls and football. His quick retort to any claim I made.

I saw a mother's spirit instilled within him. Respect and consideration for the moment with not one selfish intention.

Children are reflections. Mirrors of those who mold them into the adults they become.

My time allowed a brief taste of his character. That reflected back a priceless life taken to leave so many filled with sorrow and most of all loss.

I am proud of that moments time. It affirms my greatest respect for his parents. Trisha and Gary know he now resides in heaven.

I saw the angel they raised. I feel the pain in their loss.

Such should never be felt. Thank you Carthage for all the pouring out of love for this family.

I am merely a tourist witnessing the why we are all blessed to have. Relationships that rally to support one another that needs all that can be offered.

You each that do make me proud.

Brandon waits for us all. Oh what a day of rejoicing that will be.

I love each that are affected. God understands. I can only cry why.

My prayers and love to Trisha and Gary and son left to the task in healing.

I will pray each day for your healing. God loves you!!!
