“ Some people would say we lost a loved one today. We didn't lose her we know right where she is. She is in heaven with our loved ones that went before her. This is just a see you later. One day we will all be together again. So until then visit with our loved ones that are there welcoming you home. Hold our babies we can no longer hold. Walk hand and hand with loved ones. We have had you for as many years as we are old. It's time for us to let you go. We love you Memomma.

“ A few things you could always count on when visiting Aunt "Reener." First, the house would be so clean, you could eat off the floor, but her first words were similar to "Goodness, if I knew you were coming I would have cleaned this filthy house." Next, summer or winter, it did not matter, it would be so warm in the house, you were going to break a sweat. Just dress like you meant it and go enjoy her and Uncle Garland anyway. Then, be ready to either eat, or find a really good excuse not to, because she was going to try and feed you something. Our collective heart goes out to all of you. We all loved and miss her.
