“ My father, Carroll Herndon, used t take us by his house pretty often when we were alot younger. We share the same middle name and he would tell me I couldn't spell, and that Ray is supposed to be spelled r-a-y and not r-a-e I remember this because I had just learned the word illiterate. This became our lil game. My dad took us back out there a few months before he passed . Always a pleasure to be around, had some great memories.

Thank you Melinda. Lots of people probably didn't realize he had a comedian side, but we had lots of laughs each Sunday we were out there. He and my mom had their own little laughs about life. He will be greatly missed. He was like a grandpa to my grandkids because he was there every Sunday of their lives.

As a child, he was my hero. Not only football, but because he could sing the best country songs and play the guitar. I always thought he would end up in Nashville, he was that good.

We went to school together, played football and I considered him a friend as well as a distant cousin. He and another graduate played and sang at their graduation. I thought that took a lot of guts. He taught me the only song I can play on a piano. Last time I saw him was at Sam Price wake. God bless you Gearld
