“ Eight years ago, when I came into this family, Tommy was my neighbor. Being a very independent person and not used to having help, I could not for the life of me understand why Tommy would get up so early and mow my yard. It was his way of helping me while Wayne was gone. He knew I had my hands full. It became a contest to see who could get it mowed first. Sometimes, he'd mow before it even needed it. It drove me nuts and I believe he thought it was funny.

He showed me card tricks and number games that would leave me scratching my head. He helped us build our porch. And of course, his way was better than ours. (In his opinion) He loved my chicken spaghetti and banana pudding. I made it for him several times. One day, after he moved from next door, I was giving him some yard equipment and he knows I get lost so he and I planned to meet at a spot on the highway. Wayne knew I was dropping that off then going to grocery store. I usually always have my phone but I left it in the truck. Well, Tommy and I sat on the tail gate of the truck and we visited for HOURS about everything under the sun. He told me just how proud he was of Wayne that day. It was so sweet. When we finally said goodbye, close to dark, I realized I had a lot of missed calls. Wayne tracked my iPhone and it looked like it was in the woods for hours, still. Wayne had called everyone in the family and had the police believing I had been kidnapped because my phone was thrown in the woods on side of the road, somewhere I wouldn't have been. 😂 The cops were coming to search the area when I called Wayne back. Tommy and I were oblivious to the scramble to locate me. He got a kick out of that.

He always asked about the kids. He had a special relationship with TJ, his first grandchild. He was proud and happy when Wayne told him he had adopted Morgan.

He will be missed by all of us. We will always wish for one more memory.
